Ecgbert had made good his supremacy over Kent and East Anglia (823), and over Mercia, Northumbria, and Wales (827-8). But scarcely had this faint semblance of national union been attained, when the work was more than undone by the onsets of heathen Danes, which soon assumed a much more organised form. Northumberland, East Anglia, and the eastern half of Mercia were soon overrun and conquered; Wessex was fiercely attacked. The struggle culminated under Alfred, whose wars form the central point of interest in our narrative.

Alfred holds in real history the place which romance assigns to Arthur; a Christian king,—

‘Scarce other than my own ideal knight,’ who rolls back the tide of heathen conquest from his native land. The peace of 878, by which more than half of England passed to the Dane, might seem the confession of a disastrous defeat. In reality it is impossible to overestimate what had been gained. Wessex was saved, and in saving Wessex Alfred saved England, and in saving England he saved Western Europe from becoming a Scandinavian power. It is true that this did not avert later conquest under Swegen and Cnut; but though that conquest gave England for a time a dynasty of Danish kings, it did not make her Scandinavian in the same sense in which the earlier conquests would have done, had they been successful. And if Wessex had lost much by the Danish inroads she had also gained something by them. They made her the representative of English national feeling, the one power in the island which could boast a royal house of unbroken national descent. The work of Alfred’s successors lay in the endeavour to win back and incorporate the under-kingdoms which had been ceded to the Danes. But the work was only very imperfectly accomplished, when it was more than undone by the renewal of the Danish inroads towards the close of the 10th century, which culminated in the election of Cnut as sole king of England in 1017. But the Danish dynasty, during more than a quarter of a century of rule, failed to make good its hold on England; and the chief significance of Cnut's exploit lies in the fact that he prepared the way for William the Norman. He first made England one. The unity thus created found an outward expression and a material frame-work in the administrative system of Henry II, and received the informing spirit which made it a living thing from the constitutional reforms of Edward I, 'the first' king since the Conquest who 'bore a purely English name, and followed a purely English policy'¹.

But in looking forward to this time we have passed far beyond the limits of our little book. We may conclude with the reflection of the Latin poet,— ‘Tantae molis erat Romanam condere gentem’².

It remains for me to express a few of the most prominent obligations which I have incurred in the preparation of this little book. For the glossary I have naturally made constant use of the new Bosworth-Toller ‘Anglo-Saxon Dictionary,’ also of Mr. Sweet’s ‘Anglo-Saxon Reader,’ the glossary to which contains an excellent selection of words. Grein’s monumental ‘Sprachschatz der angelsächsischen Dichter’ has also been of the greatest service, especially with reference to the poetical passages in the Chronicle.

My thanks to the many friends who have helped me and who are helping me with my work I defer. Three names I must, however, mention. In the first place I must thank Professor Earle, to whom I owe my original introduction to Anglo-Saxon studies, for the generosity with which he consented to the recasting of his work by a younger hand, and not less for untiring help and sympathy throughout the work. I must thank Professor Napier, who, amid pressing occupations of his own, found time to read the proofs of the glossary, and to make very many useful corrections and suggestions. He is not, however, in the slightest degree responsible for the general arrangement and execution of the glossary. And I must thank the Reverend J. T. Lang, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, who, when I went to Cambridge to collate the Parker MS., received me, a perfect stranger, as if I had been an old friend. To his hospitality and kindness, and that of his colleagues, I owe many pleasant associations. It is a matter of genuine satisfaction to me that my first real experience of Cambridge life should have been in connection with the College which bears the same name as my own.

GLOSSARY	86

EXPLANATION OF THE GLOSSARY.

In the references A has been written for A throughout; this will cause no confusion, as any quotations made from MS. A. (W.) will be indicated by W.

The interpolations in MS. A are indicated by a.

An asterisk after a form or reference means that the form or passage cited will be found in both the principal texts, A and E.

Where a word occurs in two or more different forms, these forms are numbered in the head-line, and to save repetition corresponding numbers affixed to the references given, thus: *â-flyman (1), â-fliëman (A) (2). p.pl. -mdon. 797A (2). E (1). This means that the form â-flyman occurs in both texts, the form â-fliëman only in A; and that the preterite plural will be found at the year 797, in A in the form âfliëmdon, in E in the form âflymdon.

A dagger prefixed to a word means that it occurs only in the poetical portions of the Chronicle.

Forms which are abnormal or corrupt are included in round brackets.

Reference is made by means of annals, unless the annal covers more than a page, in which case the page is given in addition. The letters t, h, m, l, b, suffixed to page-references, indicate top, high, middle, low, bottom.

Names of persons are not included in the glossary.

Names of places are included in the glossary unless (1) their identification is doubtful, (2) the form is so similar to the modern form as to cause no difficulty. Local names are indicated by the letters NL.

A reference without any form preceding it indicates that the head-word occurs in that place in an unchanged form; i. e. verbs in the infinitive, substantives in the nominative or accusative (where the latter is the same as the former).

Unless otherwise noted the finite mood cited is always the indicative, the person, always the third (singular or plural).

The abbreviations st.str.wk. applied to verbs and nouns indicate strong and weak respectively. In the case of adjectives the terms indefinite and definite are sometimes used to express the strong and weak declensions.

p. = preterite. p.p. = past participle. fq. = frequently.

The ordinary grammatical abbreviations require no explanation.

Words in which eo, ie, i, e occur, have sometimes to be sought under y.

Words in which æ occur have sometimes to be sought under e, and conversely.

þ and ð are not distinguished.

German words are given for comparison only when they are nearer in form or meaning to the Anglo-Saxon than any word in modern English.

Obsolete or provincial words are printed in spaced type, e.g. 'l a v e.'

¹ Originally 892, but increased by a year as well as all following years up to 929 (originally 928) inclusive. The first scribe seems to have omitted 930, which was a blank annal. The corrector first alters 929 into 930, then strikes it out altogether, and proceeds to take a year off, making 931 into 930, and so on to the end of 937 (originally 938). Then 938 is inserted, 939 left as it was, 941 and 942 are made into 940 and 941; 942 is inserted, and at 943 the original series is resumed unaltered. Up to 930, W., with one exception, agrees with the corrected numbers in A, after that point it retains the original numbering.

⁷ The MSS. B. and C., after closing the year 915 (918 A.) fetch back to 896 (the annals 896 to 901 being blank) and introduce the present episode, which may be considered to close at 924 (925 A.). Both are then barren to 934 (935 A.), where they fall in with the usual current of History. The episode forms therefore a little Mercian Register of about twenty years, and might be styled the 'Annals of Æthel-flæd.' The compiler of D. has in-
